1. EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The National Youth Service Corps (NARYSEC) Policy is an important document that will act as a guide as to how the Department of Rural Development and Land Reform (DALRRD) must implement the NARYSEC programme within the context of youth empowerment in rural development.

The Department through its Comprehensive Rural Development Programme (CRDP) and the National District Development Model (DDM) provides holistic strategy towards developing rural areas.

These services are delivered in a manner that engage and empower rural communities to actively participate towards the improvement of their quality of life and overall economic up-liftment of their communities. The NARYSEC Programme therefore forms part of the broader community development approach adopted by the DALRRD.

The NARYSEC Policy draws its manifest from the National Youth Development Policy of 2009 – 2014, National Youth Policy of 2015-2030 and the National Development Plan Vision of 2030 that is currently being implemented as an essential planning tool, guiding the country on holistic approaches towards youth development.

Emanating from this National Youth Policy are various proposal documents, such as the NARYSEC Policy, that seek to position youth development in the mainstream of South Africa's developmental agenda and programme.

High levels of unemployment, deepening poverty and increasing inequalities have been identified by the South African Government as three persistent challenges the country must overcome. Nowhere is the impact of these three challenges more acutely experienced, than in the rural communities of South Africa. Rural communities daily face various challenges, which include:

- High levels of unemployment, particularly amongst the youth;
- Lack of vocational skills, against a backdrop of very limited job opportunities, exacerbating this situation; and
- Lack of economic and social development, including limited access to government services as well as basic services.

Youth face particular challenges in gaining employment in the South African labour market. The unemployment rate amongst young people 15 - 24 years and 25 - 34 years of age, recorded the highest unemployment rates of 66.5% and 43.8% respectively in the Quarterly Labour Force Survey (QLFS) of Statistics South Africa for Quarter 3 (Q3) of 2021.

MINISTER'S INITIALS:

It is the mandate of the DALRRD to implement interventions to support and capacitate rural communities, with a specific focus on the upliftment of youth and women, so that they can meaningfully participate in the economy.

The NARYSEC Programme, which was established in September 2010, is one of the contributions of the Department of Agriculture, Land Reform and Rural Development (DALRRD) towards alleviating the high levels of unemployment amongst young people in rural areas.

The main focus of the NARYSEC Programme is to capacitate rural youth so that they can become economically active and contribute towards the upliftment of their rural communities.

The primary objectives of the re-focused NARYSEC Programme are to:

- Recruit unemployed rural youth as part of the rural economy transformation strategy;
- Build the capacity of rural youth through various skills development interventions;
- Facilitate the transitioning of recruited youth into economic activities;
- Encourage recruited youth to be involved in the upliftment of their communities; and
- Provide post programme support to youth that have exited the programme.

The adoption of the NARYSEC Policy by the DALRRD, as a catalyst for youth empowerment, will assist the programme in its endeavour to empower young people.

It is, however, important to note that the full implementation of this policy, by all units and branches within the DALRRD, will ensure the realization of the core objectives of the programme.

2. PROBLEM STATEMENT

The programme has had two formal impact evaluations (2013) and 1 review conducted by the Human Sciences Research Council (HSRC) in 2018/19. In 2018 the Human Sciences Research Council and the Department embarked on a joint review of the programme. Approximately 1400 stakeholders were consulted during the 2018/19 review process including former NARYSEC participants, TVET colleges and other training providers, the National Youth Development Agency and internal and external government officials.

Some of the key problems identified by the HSRC from the last review in 2018 was that the programme was excellent at skills development but evidence showed that the skills and qualification level acquired by NARYSEC graduates is still too low to enable them to compete with graduates from regular programmes of TVET colleges or those from universities, in a labour market characterized by high levels of unemployment. The qualifications are not even deemed sufficient to establish a niche of artisans that would shield NARYSEC graduates from that competition. Another challenge is the lack of a systematic tracking of, and structured support for NARYSEC graduates after completion of the programme. There also appeared to be a mismatch in the types and levels of skills offered by NARYSEC training programmes and those that are in demand on the labour market.

The policy therefore aims to accelerate youth development in line with other government programmes and priorities through the establishment of partnerships and recruiting youth with the end in mind. Youth will now be recruited through multi-stakeholder collaboration and aligned to economic opportunities in a district.

3. CONTEXT

3.1 Introduction

The CRDP was developed as a holistic strategy to develop rural areas. The aim of NARYSEC is to develop a cadre of young people who would become change agents within their communities. It also sought to equip unemployed rural youth with the appropriate skills needed to gain access to employment opportunities and engage in productive activities that contribute to the realization of the CRDP's vision of vibrant, equitable and sustainable rural communities. Two iterations of the policy and programme have been implemented in the last decade, with the second one in 2015 after a comprehensive evidence-based review led to significant changes in the programme in terms of its duration (from 48 to 24 months) and introduction of key phases (skills phase linked to government programme opportunities such as for disaster management, Agri-Parks, land reform, etc.).

The NARYSEC Programme has, to date, enrolled 17 393 youth since its inception in September 2010. 11 475 of the enrolled youth have exited the programme for various reasons, which include completing their skills programme, resignation, death, and termination due to absconding from training.

This policy document outlines the implementation framework of the NARYSEC programme. Further details on NARYSEC implementation processes are documented in the NARYSEC procedural manual, standard operating procedures and circulars.

The Department's expanded mandate is linked to the National Development Plan's vision for an integrated and inclusive rural economy and to respond to development needs of specific territorial areas.

The issue of land forms the basis of development in many rural areas as well as commercial farmland in South Africa and therefore an essential part of the strategy includes the implementation of an improved land tenure system. Youth are crucial in transforming the rural economy. Young women and men in rural areas face constraints with regard to both accessibility and availability of services and facilities, resulting in fewer opportunities employment than in urban areas.

3.2 Understanding the Character of Youth

Youth is a heterogenous group within society that often reflect the spiritual and material divisions in that society. This group may exhibit the following characteristics:

- Youth are socialised and moulded within specific social environments (rich, poor, urban and rural);
- Youth assimilate knowledge of all kinds;
- Young people are continuously searching for a rational understanding of their surroundings. They display curiosity, rebelliousness, impatience, and enthusiasm/energy. As a result, all societies seek the minds of young people in order to tap into their energy for various country programmes; and
- Youth may be easily influenced into activities that are counter-productive to their own interests.

Young people in rural areas are the future of the agricultural and rural sector, but often lack the guidance and support necessary to fully contribute to the development of their communities, thereby fuelling the vicious cycle of rural underdevelopment, mass migration to cities and poverty, and the destruction of family units. Acknowledging and addressing their needs and aspirations is vital for rural economic growth and agrarian transformation.

3.3 The National Development Plan

The National Development Plan (NDP) 2030 speaks to Integrated Rural Development as a vehicle to reduce youth unemployment and revitalize rural economies. The NDP further recognizes that South Africa has an “urbanizing and youthful population. This presents an opportunity to boost economic growth, increase employment and reduce poverty.”<sup>1</sup> The NDP has adopted a “youth lens” in preparing its proposals, inter alia:

- a) Strengthen youth service programmes and introduce new, community-based programmes to offer young people life-skills training,

- entrepreneurship training and opportunities to participate in community development programmes;
- b) Expand learnerships and make training vouchers directly available to job seekers;
- c) The programme will be aligned to government priorities and legislation that govern skills development in the country as outlined in the NDP and CRDP

3.4 Comprehensive Rural Development Programme (CRDP)

The CRDP was launched by the Department in July 2019, it is a programme designed aimed at ensuring that all spheres of government achieve social cohesion and development of rural areas. The CRDP is an enabling vehicle that will ensure that rural people to take control of their livelihoods with the support by government. It was specifically introduced to deal with rural poverty effectively through an integrated agrarian transformation and strategic investment in economic and social infrastructure that will benefit these rural communities.

Government through CRPD programme puts specific emphasis on the promotion of economic growth through creation of work and therefore improving the quality of life of rural households, enhancing food security through exploiting the economic opportunities in those rural areas. Some key components of the CRDP include:

- a) Community Mobilisation and Empowerment;
- b) The CRDP Job Model which includes value chains and enterprise development; and
- c) Adding value to land reform processes in CRDP sites.

The CRDP makes provision for a rural employment and skills training model which has set a platform for the NARYSEC programme to enter into partnerships that will ensure the training of unemployed youth and transitioning them into the economic opportunities. The CRDP therefore forms the basis on which the variety of skills development interventions implemented through the NARYSEC Programme are built.

<sup>4</sup> The White Paper on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, 2016, recognises: disability as an evolving concept. Disability is imposed by society when a person with a physical, psychosocial, intellectual, neurological and/or sensory impairment is denied access to full participation in all aspects of life, and when society fails to uphold the rights and specific needs of individuals with impairments.
